

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A band that can be implanted into an eye to re-attach a retina. The implanted band exerts a pressure that presses the retina into a globe of the eye. The band has a length that is at least 100 degrees of the circumference of the globe of the eye. The band may be injected into the eye with a syringe type injector.